THE WEATHER.

The daily record of the thermometer in this city is reported by A. T. Player, druggist, corner Main and First streets. The record for yesterday was: 7 a. m., 29 degrees above; 12 m., 35 degrees above; 4 p. m., 34 degrees above; 8 p. m., 22 degrees above.

ABOUT THE CITY.

John Maguire of Butte was a visitor in this city yesterday.

Samuel Peterson, who resides on Cedar street, is laid up with a broken leg.

Giles Brownell returned from Helena last evening, being unable to serve on the grand jury owing to ill health.

D. Cohen, sr., returned last evening from Helena, where he was excused from serving as juror on the United States grand jury.

There will be German Lutheran service to-night at the Christian church; Sunday school at 7 p. m.; service at 7:30. All are cordially invited. Rev. M. Mertz.

The ladies of the Christian church will give a "William Tell" sociable at the Kirby store on Main street Thursday evening. A good time is guaranteed to all who attend.

Barney Odenhouse, who broke a rib in an accident at the upper works last week, resulting in inflammation of the lungs, is rapidly improving and will probably be able to be about in a few days.

The Lyceum club will have its first meeting this evening at the Central school. The programme will be both musical and literary and will include a discussion of the International Railroad scheme.

John O'Neil, while hauling wood a few miles from the city, accidentally caught his leg between the wagon and a stump, breaking the limb near the knee. He was taken to his home on Cherry street, where he is confined.

G. H. Harding while at work at the upper works yesterday morning met with a serious accident, breaking his leg near the ankle. He was taken to the hospital where Dr. Snyder set the fractured limb. Mr. Harding will be confined to his bed for several weeks.

Thomas Boland and Miss Katie Hoy were married yesterday by Rev. Father DeSiere at the Catholic church, also Joseph P. Bourk and Miss Catherine Toner were joined in wedlock; Henri Ouerbach and Miss Theresa Matt were also married at the same place by Father DeSiere.

Leopold Schmidt, of Butte, last night opened up the old Petrits saloon on Park avenue. The place has been thoroughly refitted and refurnished and makes a fine saloon. The furniture has not all arrived but Mr. Schmidt states that in about two weeks he will give a grand opening night. Ed. Chassey and Fred. Fetters will preside behind the bar.

The regular monthly meeting of the Alert Hose company will be held this evening at 9 o'clock in the hose house. Several important matters are to be considered. It is thought probable that it will be necessary to elect new officers for two vacancies which have recently occurred and the members are requested to turn out in force without fail.

Drs. McKenzie and McDonald have been busy the past week refurnishing their pleasant office rooms on First street. Dr. McDonald yesterday added a new feature to his dental parlors in the way of a gas apparatus by means of which he will hereafter extract teeth without pain, provided the patient chooses to indulge in the luxury.

Among the arrivals at the Montana yesterday were: C. J. Jones, San Francisco; G. W. Dickinson, Tacoma; Charles H. Annan, Omaha; A. D. Simpson, San Francisco; J. S. Coan, Minneapolis; E. W. Winstanley, Missoula; H. F. Gibson, M. D., Chicago; M. S. Lamberton, Helena; Frank J. Guth, Chicago; J. H. Christman, agent Emma Abbott Co.; S. F. King, B. C. W. Evans, P. J. Brophy, Butte.

Greig will receive buttonhole and corsage bouquets from Salt Lake for the ball to-night.

Mrs. Lamberton of Helena will give an informal talk to the ladies of Anaconda on the subject of Physical Culture and Delicate mode of expression, with a view of organizing classes in same, on Wednesday morning, November 12, at 11 o'clock in parlors of the Montana. All are cordially invited to attend.

CHAT WITH A CHAIRMAN

Some of the Phases of the Political Situation in Running Review.

A TALK WITH MARCUS DALY

He Gives His Version of the Victory and Says that the Returns are a Good Enough Celebration—A Talk About the Outlook.

As soon as last week's election returns showed that the state was safe for the democratic ticket, Marcus Daly, chairman of the state central committee, started for his ranch in the Bitter Root valley. Accompanied by the members of his family, who expect to pass the winter at the Montana, Mr. Daly returned yesterday to Anaconda.

"Well," said Mr. Daly to a STANDARD reporter last evening, "Missoula's official count is made and the result ought to be gratifying to all our friends. Missoula did grandly. Judge Dixon has 66 majority in the county and Matts has 219, and I tell you that's breaking the record in good style." The gratifying results shown by the official count of other counties were mentioned as the conversation ran on, and Mr. Daly added: "I see that there is a good deal of talk about holding celebration in honor of the democratic victory. The party certainly has every reason in the world for being jubilant but, at the same time, I feel somewhat that the results themselves are about as complete a celebration as could be devised. I do not know what we could do to make the testimony of these returns more impressive than they are right now."

"As for myself, in the office of chairman, I worked as hard as I knew how from first to last for the success of the ticket," continued Mr. Daly, "and I can bear testimony to the faithful support given by the democrats in every part of the state. Those of us who went to the front and did the best we could are not out for compliments—we simply did our duty to the best of our ability. As far as I am concerned, when the polls closed and the count showed how handsomely the democracy had won, that was all the celebration I ask for."

"Of course, I do not want to be understood as throwing a single straw in the way of democrats who want to get up a formal celebration. I only mean to say that the victory just as it stands is complete enough for me. Besides, I have just got back to business to-day and am up to my neck in it already. The canvass took a good deal of my time, and I must catch up with my work and be in a hurry about it. I have noticed the suggestion that Anaconda is the right place for a big gathering of democrats, because it is the banner town in the banner county. This county certainly made a fine showing, but I believe it is satisfied to rest on its record. Of course, we will always be glad to welcome our friends to this city, at the same time, it seems to me that any large celebration just now would better be held in Butte or in Helena."

Talking about the features of the October canvass, Mr. Daly continued: "The causes that brought on the cyclone in the East operated in Montana to a greater or less extent. In the first place, republicans in Montana are not high tariff men. How in reason can they be? What are the business interests of the whole section of the United States west of the Missouri river that should lead voters to favor the increase of duties which congress ordered last session? Montana, for instance, is not a manufacturing state. It is willing to be assessed up to a point for the benefit of manufacturing establishments in the East, but it is not willing to be bled."

This state has wonderful possibilities in the way of manufacturing, and all these will be realized by and by, because the railroads are making it possible to bring to us every needed article without our reach just now. But we'll never get our hands on the needed material to operate with if the tariff tax is made so high as to amount to absolute prohibition, except in case of the favored few, of raw materials we do not produce. Our people are learning all about this, especially the large class of mechanics and miners, but these men have had the cry of reduced wages. I have heard of their ears and have been told to vote for protection—no matter how outrageously congress abused the world—in order to protect their wages. Now, what has happened? The McKinley bill certainly advances prices—if it does not, what in heaven's name does it do? It certainly wasn't proposed as a measure for reducing prices; in fact, it advanced them. Did it raise wages? I haven't heard that it did? Will it raise wages in Montana? There are no signs of that, because, as far as legislation is concerned, the conditions under which a man earns a day's wages in Butte, for instance, are precisely what they were before the McKinley bill was heard of. If, on the other hand, the republicans had kept their heads and adjusted the tariff to a lower scale, would that have reduced the wages paid by any mining company in Butte? Not to the extent of one dime a year, because, as before, as far as legislation goes, the conditions under which men earn money in Butte remain unchanged. As a rule, wages are pretty fair in Montana—at any rate I believe the masses of men in the state agree in saying that earnings are satisfactory. The miners of this state are beyond the reach of anything congress undertakes to do, and there isn't a doubt in the world that wages will continue to be as good or better than at present, because the resources of the state afford it now and will afford it as long as you and I are here to pay wages or to earn them."

"Then, again," Mr. Daly added, "the silver question was a very important factor in the canvass. Montana is straight out for free coinage. The people of the state were displeased with the course pursued by the republican majority. Most of the republican newspapers of the Northwest were pretty quiet about this question until after the count was made in this state, but I notice it didn't take them long to get their work in as soon as the result was announced, and the most prominent of them are declaring now that the defeat in Montana served the national republican party just right. That is to say, they admit now that the democrats of Montana had the right side of the argument in October."

"But, after all," continued Mr. Daly, "the Homestake tunnel business was bed rock in our campaign. I lived for one solid year under the firm conviction that this state was outrageously robbed last year, that the fruits of a victory which democrats fairly won were stolen by a few men in the republican party, in order to promote their own personal ambition. I have said this to my friends, I have declared it in the face of the very men who committed the robbery, I have thrown it in the teeth of the men who wear the stolen honors, I have announced it in every company of men where I have had a hearing between San Francisco and the city of Washington. I served notice on republicans in the senate chamber that Montana would square accounts with them. Some of us who have been vilified for a year had to be patient a good while, but the political lane came to its turning as I believed, on my life, that it would come. There are the returns of last week's election, there is a solemn promise made good, there is Montana's vindication; and the victory is not so much to the glory of a political party—it was the work of the majority of the people of this state."

"I admit to you," continued Mr. Daly, "that so far as I am concerned the result is extremely gratifying. It is so satisfactory that I care not one snap of my finger for the criticisms which it has pleased some of the elements in the opposition to heap on me. To say nothing of the dishonesty of part of it, some of it has been harsh and sometimes it has been extremely cruel. I certainly have not been insensible to all this, but I have the testimony of Tuesday's returns to prove that I am even with these men. The books show that the account is balanced between me and some of the individuals and newspapers that have taken their slack at me. The conditions have changed now and everything is all right. I have packed my blankets in my time, and I can pack the abuse of any man who thinks that he can hurt the democratic party by attacking me. My assailants are with the minority, and that is all the vindication I ask, so far as I am personally concerned."

"Now to return to the subject we started in with," Mr. Daly continued, "I think the best celebration democrats can have is to make sure of a good record in the administration of affairs. The people will expect a good deal of the democratic party in this state and they have a right to. Good men have been elected and good government will be demanded. If the democratic state government gives a clean, careful administration, as we all confidently believe it will, taking account of the real interests of every class in the state, there won't be any question as to democratic supremacy in Montana for a good while to come. It may be true that here, as all over the country, the sweeping victories of our party are due to some extent to the fact that republicans kept away from the polls, intending to punish their party by that course, but I believe that the democrats gain steadily in strength in this state, and the best evidence I have on that point I found in the fact that, in a dozen different counties, the best workers this year were bright young men who never took much interest in politics before. They were wide awake this year and, I tell you, there are a good many of them. They are the best blood in the party. I could give the names of a good many of them, but you will hear from them before this election is much older. I believe that this rising element will gather about itself the working force of Montana and that, under honest and prudent management, the control of the state, so far as politics goes, will be held by the democrats."

"Now," concluded Mr. Daly, "as I have talked so long, and as I don't get the honor of a newspaper interview very often, let me give you one word which you can add, if you conclude to print what I have been saying. In a little while I am going to call the state central committee together so that it may be reorganized and put in good shape to go ahead. The committee has got to be a live organization from this time on. As chairman of the committee I have served my time—in fact I think I shall not accept the office of chairman again, and I want the leading democrats of the state to help the committee to find a good man for the place. It will not be a hard matter to find the right man, there are plenty to choose from, but the party is under good general organization now and it must be kept so. Not that I intend to take any less interest in the affairs of the democratic party in Montana; I will be in line every time and will be among the first to answer when the roll is called, as I believe all the older men who have been known as party leaders will be ready. But the strength and hope of the party in Montana is in its younger men, and I am in favor of having some of them carry the flag. So, you see, as far as management is concerned, I am going to do what, in my time, I have told so many others to do—I am going to step aside and let the procession pass."

WILL NOT BE STOPPED

Northern Pacific Trains Will Still Run Through Butte.

CHANGES TO BE MADE

The Passenger Service to Be Reduced in the Winter as Usual But That Is All—The New Order of Things.

Assistant General Manager Dickinson, of the Northern Pacific railroad, was in Anaconda yesterday. "You do not get the story about proposed changes in the Butte and Bozeman service right," said Mr. Dickinson to a STANDARD reporter. "In all probability there will be a change in the winter schedule from the present time card, but it is not proposed to abandon the service via the Homestake tunnel route. In all probability the two through passenger trains that have been run since the route was operated will not be kept up during the winter months. It has always been the policy of the railroad company to reduce its passenger service in the winter time, but that change will not interrupt regular trains by way of Butte. The expectation of the company is to make one through train, but to make two sections of it between Logan and Garrison. In that case the Helena and Butte service would be identical, as each section will be fully equipped with dining cars and sleepers."

"The new schedule," continued Mr. Dickinson, "has not been completed and I have no idea how trains will be run. There will be several changes for Butte, of course, but it is not the plan of the Northern Pacific to stop through passenger service by way of that city."

Special Correspondence of the Standard.

BUTTE, Nov. 11.—Agent James McCall of the Northern Pacific road was questioned by a STANDARD representative to-day as to the report published in the STANDARD this morning that the through trains in the winter schedule, say from Butte, were to be taken off. Mr. McCall said:

"I have no official information that trains 3 and 4 of the Northern Pacific will be taken off. My knowledge of the workings of the road however, leads me to believe that these trains will be taken off during the winter months, say from December 15 to March 1. At no time have I expected that these trains would be run during the winter. We are not doing a gallery business. We are not sending a train through the country just to use up axle grease. In short, we are not running two through trains when one will easily take all the business. The passenger business, as in every previous year, has fallen off greatly since September 1. There was, of course, a big travel during September and October, but it has fallen off now and will fall off more. We don't believe the people of Butte expect us to run empty coaches through the country. When business picks up again in March we will resume the short line train and keep it up all winter."

"But do not think that Butte is to be accommodated at all. You will still be able to ride from Butte to New York without putting your hat on. Pullman and dining cars will run from Garrison to Bozeman, through Butte, and Butte will have all it can desire. There are no arrivals in Butte now anyway from the east, and there are very few departures. There is no more in real estate now and will be none until spring. Very few people visit Butte in the winter."

"The quickest train between Butte and the east is that which leaves here at 10 o'clock in the evening. Nobody takes it. Yet it is a fact that you can go from Butte to Chicago faster by that train than by any other train on any road. It gets into Chicago two hours after the train which leaves here at 4 p. m. I had the train put on especially for the accommodation of Butte people, but it is a fact that there is scarcely any travel by it."

"I have no official knowledge as to the taking off of these trains. But I expect that they will be taken off. If they are taken off I can assure you, first, that they will be put on again March 1, and second, that Butte will still have Pullman and dining cars running out of Butte, and they will never realize that the train is not a through one."

HE WAS JEALOUS.

How a Divorced Husband Prevented a Marriage.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—William J. Miller and his housekeeper, Mrs. Albert Pallo, a divorced woman, were to have been married to-day, but there was an unexpected obstruction in the person of the divorced husband. A short time ago Miller fell from a ladder and broke his leg. While he was lying in bed to-day cursing the fractured limb and conversing with Mrs. Pallo about the coming wedding Mr. Pallo suddenly burst into the room and, seizing Miller by the broken leg, dragged him from the bed, again breaking the fracture.

Pallo then seized a hammer and endeavored to brain his rival, but Miller defended himself vigorously and Mrs. Pallo joined in the fight, getting possession of the hammer and using it on her former husband.

When the police came in and stopped the fight they found Miller fatally injured. Pallo in a serious condition and Mrs. Pallo slightly wounded.

WORLD'S FAIR.

Arrangements for the Location of the Big Buildings.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—The local directory of the world's fair to-day adopted a resolution favoring the placing on Lake front of three permanent buildings, the art gallery, government buildings and aquarium. Three structures for the Lake front were also agreed upon, a building for decorative art exhibits, a music hall and a building for electrical devices. A water palace is suggested as a possibility, a portion of the miniature villages of curios is proposed to be located on the Lake front. After considering the matter of letting the contractors decide to take such steps until after consulting the national commission.

THE SUNDAY QUESTION.

The Carpenters' Union Propose to Have One Day's Rest.

It is interesting for an observer to watch the advancement of our glorious commonwealth, to observe the wild tumultuous struggle of money-making, with all conscientious scruples thrown to the winds, and the laws of nature most grossly violated. We are passing from a state of semi-civilization into a condition more favorable to a civilized community, and hence we are striving to abolish the customs of a semi-barbaric people, and adopt a system more favorable to the advancement of intelligence, and the physical well-being of the working classes.

Take, for instance, the Sunday question, how totally its sacred laws are disregarded. But if one has no conscientious scruples from a religious standpoint, let us consider the matter from a monetary standpoint. If you have a horse you certainly will give him all the rest you can and feed him well, that you may get all possible work out of him; but your men you expect to work like a steam engine, both night and day, and, of course, Sundays, too. You do not stop to think that a man worked down to the lowest point of existence, who can scarcely drag his weary limbs home at night, can do hardly half as much work from one day to another as the man who has the rest that nature calls for, the man who can retire early, instead of working till midnight, and who has Sunday to himself, to recuperate his physical strength. The philosophy of common sense will teach a man that such is the case.

Now considering these facts, we, the members of the Carpenters' Union of Anaconda, have resolved to ask for one day's rest out of seven, which we consider we are justly entitled to. And for the furtherance of our cause we have procured the use of the opera house for next Friday evening, where we will have some able speaking on the subject. Those who are not interested in the cause, come anyway, and hear what is said; possibly you may hear something that will do you good. All trade unions are specially invited to attend.
